This book was about a man named Guy who lives in a world where people burn books. He tries to change things. I enjoyed this great peice of literature.

Fahrenheit 451 is about a "fireman" who burns books for a living. This book is a dystopian novel, or a novel that takes place with a "bad" future. The main character is Guy Montag. He meets a girl named Clarisse. Clarisse was an odd girl. She changed how Montag thought. Some might think that this a good thing, but Montag started to get restless, on one of his jobs, he stole books and started to read. He started to grow a passion for literature. His life as he knows it starts to crumble down. Everything he thought was right ended up being wrong. His wife is scared of being caught. His friends stab him in the back. Montag's life is burning slowly, but at the same time, he starts to find the man that he really is in the process.

This book is about a fireman named Guy Montag who lives in a world where firemen make fires instead of putting them out, and burn books instead of preserving them. Montag lives his life like every other fireman...until he meets Clarisse. Clarisse is a young girl that has a different perspective of almost everything. Also, she isn't afraid to speak her mind. Clarisse told Montag about the books, and said that they shouldn't be burnt. Montag started to agree with her, and started to steal the books from the places that he was burning before they got burnt so that he could read them. Later, Montag's wife told Beatty(Montag's boss) about how Montag was stealing the books. Beatty makes Montag burn his own house down, and then Montag kills Beatty and manages to outrun the Hound. Finally, Montag goes to Faber's house and they make a plan for how Montag should run away. I wouldn't recommend this book. I didn't enjoy this book because it was rarely suspenseful, and some parts didn't make much sense what was happening.

Maze Runner Post

In the beginning of hte book, our protagonist Thomas is waking up in the Glade, where the teenage boys who have lost their memories attempt to solve the Maze that they live in the middle of. No one remembers exactly who they nare or where they came from before they came here. The Runners are the people who investigate the Maze and try to find the way(s) to escape it. Thomas feels for sure inside himself that he MUST be Runner. One day later, the first girl arrives, which is extremely suspicious as no other girl has ever arrived at the Glade. Before falling into a coma, she chants that everything is going to change . The Gladers later learn that no one else will come to the Glade. Thomas and the girl, Teresa, are able to communicate telepathically with each other. Through her, Thomas learns that the entire Maze is a code. To learn about the code, Thomas must earn his trust from the superstitious Gladers and earn the right to become a Maze Runner and solve the Maze. (Was that good enough?)

I would reccomend this for people that are patient and are looking for a sort of mystery. The book takes you through a kind of dystopian world where people live unaware of the world beyond the walls of the Maze, and the reader has to think hard about this puzzle just like the Gladers in the story. If you're someone who wants a happy ending where everything is solved, this book will crush your soul (emotionally).

I've already read this, and it was a real page-turner. The sequels and the prequel are even better in my opinion.
